

Learning Support Services

Students receiving learning support services are included in the regular education classes as much as possible. Depending on need, students can also receive direct instruction in the area of reading, writing, comprehension, or in some cases can receive content area instruction in the learning support environment.

Learning support teachers and paraprofessionals support students in their regular education classes and are an integral part of their classroom experience. In-class support looks different for each student, however, some services provided can include: increasing students' time on task in the classroom, increasing students' comprehension of in-class tasks/assignments, testing accommodations, comprehension checks for concepts presented in class and other accommodations and modifications as determined by a child's Individual Education Plan.
